The prospect of a multi-million deficit in the state treasury, due to diversion of 76 per cent of the 3-cent sales tax back to home governments including the public schools, still is the top problem of the Siger administration.

"A major part of my day, from early morning to late at night, is being devoted to this matter of finances," said Governor Siger. "I am now working on the budget message to the legislature. We're going to meet the issue frankly. The people must realize the seriousness of the financial situation which today confronts the State of Michigan."

The governor said he was concerned over the impression, still prevalent in the minds of many citizens, that the sales tax amendment diverted one out of three of the state's major source of revenue to the local governments.

one thing the loss of 76 per cent of the sales tax back to the local governments will reveal that the difference is 48 per cent which on an annual volume of $100,000,000 would involve a cool $48,000,000 of additional revenue diverted from the state treasury.

A variety of solutions have been advanced by members of the legislature.

Senator Haskell L. Nichols on April 10 proposed a referendum in April on whether a state constitutional convention should be called. Nichols feels that the present constitution has been amended to the point where a brand new charter should be adopted. The need for such revision has been recognized at Lansing for many years, and Nichols feels that the present constitution has been amended to the point where a brand new charter should be adopted. The need for such revision has been recognized at Lansing for many years, and Nichols feels that the present constitution has been amended to the point where a brand new charter should be adopted.

Other schemes to whittle down the "deficit" include just the state and local legislative leaders, together with the governor and state officials, may arrive at some solution.

With the financial problem at the top of his list, Governor Siger told the members of the staff at the residence of Governor Thomas E. Dewey — who, incidentally, was re-elected in November by a smashing majority. Mrs. Kelly felt that such a staff should be under civil service and that the wife of the governor should be relieved of the chores of presiding over brooms and pans.

By contrast to the New York official residence, the Michigan plan is fairly modest. It is extremely unlikely that more than $150,000 (even at today's highly inflated costs) would be needed.

When we asked Governor Siger about the "mansion," he expressed himself with considerable feeling. He didn't approve of the idea of a "mansion." He was living in a small apartment at a Lansing hotel and the governor's term, as everyone knows, is for two years only. "There are more important things before me," he said, wearily. "It was already 6 o'clock then, and my members of the executive staff had left for the day. All of which brings us right back to where we started. How can the State of Michigan avert new taxes or a whopping big deficit? That is the job issue."

The "mansion" idea is not Siger's creation. It popped up in 1946 when the state legislature decided that the State of Michigan should provide suitable housing facilities and business offices for the governor and his family and others who are needed to maintain the building.

The state board of auditors in 1946 engaged Alden Dow, famous Midland architect. Designs were submitted to the board shortly after January 1, thereby focusing public attention on the whole matter.

The governor is a public figure of major importance; his job does not end daily at 5 p. m.; the office imposes upon him unusual responsibilities and duties.

The proposed official "white house" at Lansing would include:

- Business offices where the governor could attend the official business in evening hours; several apartments; 10-15 house; the governor's private quarters; the staff and their families — all of whom are needed to prepare meals, tidy up, and otherwise be on hand for a variety of needs including state official functions.

School Notes

Final Hearing Tests Given — Pupils whose hearing was questionable in the group screening tests were given a final test more exact and exact. Pupils found to have hearing losses were asked to visit a specialist, if they had not done so. If suffering from some active ear trouble, suggestions and recommendations were made regarding educational readjustments. The school and the teachers will receive reports regarding each student tested.

Emphasis in the entire hearing conservation program is on the prevention of hearing losses and deafness. It is important that all ear troubles such as earaches, stuffed ears, tenderness around the ears, or especially running ear, should be treated immediately to an ear specialist.

As a result of her trip to Florida over the holidays, Mrs. Matison's 4th grade has had a very interesting Florida exhibit. Some of the objects included were: water from the Atlantic Ocean to prove that the ocean is salty, shells picked from the shore of the ocean, one of which was given such 4th grader, magnolia leaves, Spanish moss, oranges and tangerines picked on Christmas day, large pine cones and pine needles about two feet in length, white sand from Florida and red from Kentucky.

The class was thrilled to hear of the death of the Marine Shores near St. Augustine, where is the Oceanarium, which contains all forms of ocean life. They also enjoyed hearing about St. Augustine, oldest city in the U. S., where is situated the youngest sea in our country, Silver Springs where, in a glass bottom boat, one could see 85 feet down into the water, and the Mammoth Cave.

A letter from Mr. Malcolm Crow in La Paz, graciously reports, among the many visits I made to the U. S., I count the one you folks among the happiest — the visit to the school, the kindness of the Kivans, your fine hospitality I have enjoyed the music so much and used it well. The music referred to was a cotton picked on the seventh grade last year to aid him in his South American work, which was done during a high school assembly last year.
