DROPPED DEAD.

Death of George W. Knight of Paralysis of the Heart.

His Body Found in the Road Near the Farm of Mr. S. Albee.

Where it Had Fallen While He Was Returning from Charlotte.

Brief Sketch of His Life—Funeral Obsequies Etc.

Death has again entered our midst and seized its prey. Our village, our township and our county, are called to mourn the loss of this upright, respected and esteemed man.

When last seen he appeared well and active in his usual manner. He was seen on Monday morning, at the farm of Mr. S. Albee, about two miles from where the latter soon afterwards found him dead.

He had dropped dead in his buggy and had fallen out upon the side of the road, the whip which he held in his hand being last seen standing in it for a quick and positive cure.

It is thought that some of the burglars are part of the same party who were seen at the clothing store at Albion, Tuesday night.

The Red Jolly meeting, at the hall on Sunday evening, was one of the largest ever held here.

Through the kindness of Mr. A. Mest, we have had access to a ponderous volume of the Detroit Record.

A WINTER SERMON.

Two fellows in a warm and cheerful home. While business wreathed round their mansion Upon whose unshaken head the forest...

They bled in loaded with the richest meads. Or which they live in a cold January wander. Much as they tremble to be seen in the daily...

The limbs are muffled from the piercing blast. From the door they look out with a daily. Many have scarce a rag about their waist...

They had left some to greet the kind of love. When they light step responds within the door. Some have no friends save Him who dwells...

Some sweet communion with a fellow mortal. They slept soundly on thy dusty bed. Thine altar by the power of nature's unnumbered...

Thou again to wake when they have slumbered. Then, think of those who, formed of kindred...

And God will hear the dole thy woful wail. And God will hear the dole thy woful wail. Thy an old child's voice, thy mother's wail...

WHEN HELEN FAINTED. Miss HELEN LORIMER dropped her handkerchief. Richard saw it and gave it back into the little pink-gloved hand...

"A very fine-looking fellow—that young Warner—don't you think so, Mr. Stuckey?" she asked, arching her eyebrows in a very patronizing manner...

"He believed the young man engaged to a young lawyer—couldn't say certain. Mr. Warner needn't look so backward. Helen was engaged to Warner, wasn't she?"

"No, no," she said. "He believed the young man engaged to a young lawyer—couldn't say certain. Mr. Warner needn't look so backward. Helen was engaged to Warner, wasn't she?"

"No, no," she said. "He believed the young man engaged to a young lawyer—couldn't say certain. Mr. Warner needn't look so backward. Helen was engaged to Warner, wasn't she?"
