The temper, on which a fine cutting edge depends is always more or less a matter of uncertainty; some tools will be finer than others, though all have gone through the same process. But, a manufacturer who has made a repuation for good work, will, in general, try to maintain it, and it is naturally to be supposed that he will do his best to secure posed that he will do his best to secure

In a well-regulated shop there is no borrowing, and there is no occasion for any. Every man has, and holds, his were when these statements were made. We say to the farmers, lay your plans.

The Farmers' Vegetable Garden. The vegetable garden as found upon a majority of farms has no definite lo-cation, but is a kind of supplement to family using inferior varieties of vege-tables in these days of railroads and other facilities for transporting seeds to almost any town and throughout our vast domain. From a five-cent paper of almost any kind of choice vegetable seed enough can be raised in one season to supply an entire neighborhood; consequently the cost of the article cannot be put for-

It costs no more to raise one than the other, but the difference in than the other, but the difference in flavor is so marked that no one would think of eating green field corn if any of the sweet or shriveled sorts could be obtained. It may also be noticed that the more the grain shrivels when mature, the better the flavor when it is has been so loud as to waken the gen-tleman and wife, and disturb them. green. Salsify.—Many are very decided in their praise of this vegetable, and we are among them. It is not cultivated enough, and generally where it is cul-tivated, too little care is given to the manner of cooking it. It needs about the same management as parsnips or carrots. Sow the seed an inch deep in drills a foot apart and thin out the plants to six inches apart when two or three inches high. They may be eaten in the fall or left in the ground until spring or taken out as needed. Repecting cooking scrape them and throw at once in water to which a life ing cooking scrape them and tle vinegar has been added. Then boil in fresh water until it has evaporated and butter, pepper and salt; mash, form into patties and roll into cracker-crumbs and fry the same as an oyster. . Twelve Hints for the Season.

THE season for transplanting is nd, and a few hints on the subject will prove valuable to the inexperienced:

1. Never expose roots to the air one moment longer than is absolutely necessary. It is incomparably better to get trees or bushes well packed by a back-set by drenching with cold that takes them a n if they get over it at ail. Never mind what ignoramuses say or do in this mat-ter of watering with cold water. Avoid lifetime. Rhubarb or pieplant is another excellent vegetable, which really costs nothing to produce, and often comes in quite opportunely as a relish during the spring months. Stringbeans should not be overlooked in beans should not be overlooked in beans should not be overlooked in making up a list for the vegetable garden. Of course, the Lima-bean must not be omitted, for it is one of the indispensable component parts of good succotash, at home or abroad. Among cabbages, cauliflowers, carrots and celery there is more in the name than in the dark, you will find the second planting will far outstrip the first. Why? Because in the second case the cart has more in the name than in the cold drought of water and baked by the sun. If you do not mulch, stir the earth above the roots frequently rather than water. Injextreme cases of backwardness water .occasionally with tepid water, but always itir the soil to prevent caking after being watered

The vegetable garden as found upon a majority of farms has no definite location, but is a kind of supplement to the area appropriated to the regular farm crops. The green corn is procured from the same field, and is often the same variety as that raised for stock or for market; the green pease sown for fattening the hogs. must also serve the family; and the supply of beets, carrots, and other roots is obtained—if at all—from a similar source. The inconsting of the inferiority of the vegetables, will more than outweigh any extra labor or expense attending the raising a full supply of the very best sorts in some convenient spot set aside for the purpose.

The gathering of the daily supplies of vegetables usually devolves upon the women of the farmer's household, and their work is often increased very man terially through his inconsiderate system of set aside for the purpose.

In old times, when tobacco was manufactured from only the best leaf grown in Virginia, there was an article put up in legs called Nigger Head Twist. Messra, W. S. Himball & Co. of Rochester, N. Y. the manufacturem of the famous Vanity Fair Tobacco and Cigarettea, have reproduced this Nigger Head, and prepered it in papers under two brands—one, dark and beavy, called Nigger Head; the other, light and mild, called Buil's Eye. These are genuine cut cave adash, and are the most economical tobaccos the working-man gan use. One pound is said to be equal to a positiff and a half of common smoking tobacco.

A Word to the Wise. We wish to caution purchasers of Dooley's Yeast Powner against buying it in bulk' or loose. It is the practice of unscrupulous grocers and dealers to keep cleap, inferior, and generally highly-injurious baking powder in bulk, and sell it for the genuine Dooley's Yeast Powner, or any other brand that is called for. Buy it only in a set is not sold in bulk.
