Yesterday I went out to Menlo Park, New Jersey, and spent the afternoon with Mr. Edison. He is a man of great energy and invention. He has discovered the electric light, the phonograph, and the gramophone.

Domestic Franking.
The following franchise of a private letter carrying business has been granted to the United States Postal Service. It is a valuable privilege that will greatly benefit the public.

THE MINNESOTA INDIANS.
The Minnesota Indians have dug up the hatch again, but they now use it only as lumbermen. They are still in the habit of digging up the hatch, but they now use it only as lumbermen.

TO SATISFY THE INVESTMENT. The modified bill embraces the following provisions:

"First—Legal tender shall be accepted at their face value for customs duties after July 1st.

"Second—Authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell funding bonds of $5,000,000 in amount.

"Third—Repealing so much of the act of August 5, 1862, as requires the retirement and cancellation of the greenbacks of legal tender for additional circulation issues to National banks.

"Fourth—Limiting the amount of legal tender to be maintained in circulation and prohibiting the Secretary of the Treasury from retiring or hoarding for any purpose whatever any portion of the amount of legal tender so established."

The views of the committee under the fourth proposition, as to the amount of greenbacks to be maintained, vary from $300,000,000 to $600,000,000 as a compromise. Should such a bill become a law, it would be a virtual settlement of the question of honest men.

The effect of such a settlement upon the business interests of the country would be invaluable. With this amount of greenbacks at par, or nearly so with gold, together with the reauthorization of silver, and the gold that is now getting into general circulation, would give us a "medium" that the country needs.

At all events almost any measure will prove better than the uncertainty caused by continual financial tinkering.

The bank act, too, that has worked so disastrously to the business interests of the country, is likely to be abolished, the Senate having already repealed it, with the probability that the House also will concur. While the act has been a terror to honest men, it has proved a covert for many rascals to shift payment of their honest debts upon the backs of the nation.

It has been shown to involuntary bankrupts that the paltry amount of about $200,000 might, had they more time to pay interest and rig up their affairs, have weathered the brief storm and again be in a career of prosperity.

Temptation means an enforcement to do wrong for some real or seeming benefit, some present or future advantage. It seeks to allure us from a right to a wrong course of life. It often puts our moral principles to the most severe test.

We have appetites, passions and propensities that are natural and proper when kept within lawful bounds, but these become sinful when unbridled and indulged. The human senses, appetites and propensities were wisely planted in our nature; without them we would not be human, and, when properly guided and controlled, their proper functions are consistent with the highest human virtue.

Human depravity is giving loose reins to our appetites and propensities. The evil does not consist in the temptation to do wrong, but in yielding to the temptation. There is no position or condition, in the world, free from temptation, though some positions and pursuits expose us more than do others.

Each one has his or her besetting sin or weakness, and avoiding temptation is steering clear of those things, scenes and positions that may tempt us beyond our ability to successfully resist. It is through the wrong direction, and not the bad nature, that we are led into temptation, and that, for this reason, the way to a heavenly life is up-hill business, while the way to destruction is down grade.

The Bible calls the one a "narrow way" and the other a "broad way." To live a righteous life is called a "warfare," and to be led into temptation, we must daily outwardly labor, and not only resist temptation. Our hearts are compared to magazines, ready to ignite at every spark of temptation.

Temptations test our real characters. All that glitters is not gold. Many souls appear well at first, but when put to the test, they prove to be worthless. And so, many persons shine brilliantly till tested by temptation, when they are weighed in the balance and found wanting.

Many have passed for good soldiers in camp, but have proved cowards in the battle field. And so, many have passed for pure, honest men and women under favorable circumstances, but when brought to face temptation, they fall, much to the grief and annoyance of their friends. But those persons did not change suddenly; their fall came from the same prior condition that they were in before, but the temptations to which a change of circumstances exposed them developed their "true inwardness." Pure gold remains gold every where, which is true of pure human character and principle.

Many persons are ignorant of circumstances that bring moral character to the test. They are not aware of the influence of their associates and companions, but we speak of general rules and principles.

Resisting temptation develops and strengthens our moral nature. Our physical powers are strengthened by vigorous exercise; our mental powers grow stronger by grappling with mental difficulties. The man who lifted the ox over the fence practiced lifting it when it was a calf, and thus gradually strengthened his muscular powers. The same law: it is strengthened by vigorous exercise in resisting temptation. It is seared or smothered by persistent yielding to vicious habits or appetites. Every temptation manfully resisted imparts new strength to overcome other or greater ones, till the roots of moral principles get so fixed in the virtuous soul, they become as immovable as the Rocky mountains. The young man who is assailed by every breeze, but who is never blown off his feet, is a man of a strong character.

It is a man of a strong character who can resist the hurricane. And the youth may easily be swayed by suggestions, but by repeated resistance, he will become proof against wrongdoing.

Resisting temptation effectually, imparts real happiness. It is always a pleasure to overcome difficulties of a secure victory. God has wisely connected happiness with upright, virtuous conduct. He has placed a conscience which smiles or frowns, applauds or condemns, as though it may become blunted by persevering in evil-doing. In selecting persons for positions of trust, we inquire about their moral characters. Will they endure the test? Will they resist temptation? How will they conduct themselves in the discharge of their duties? Blessed is the man that endures temptation, for when he has tried he will receive the crown of life.

Somebody's Mother, The woman who had a young son, and had been with the child for some time.

The street was wet with a recent shower, and the woman's feet were very muddy.

She stood at the crossing and waited long, alone, for a carriage to pass by.

She looked at the ground with a look of despair, and she saw the mud on her shoes.

She turned and saw a young boy, who had just come from school, and she called to him.

"Come here, my boy, and see my shoes," she said, and the boy came up to her.

"What's the matter, mother?" he asked, and she told him of her shoes.

"Don't worry, mother," he said, "I'll help you." And he took her shoes and began to clean them.

"How kind you are, my boy!" she said, and she looked at him with a smile.

"It's nothing, mother," he said, "I just wanted to help you." And he finished cleaning the shoes.

"Thank you very much, my boy," she said, and she took her shoes and went home.

And she never forgot the kindness of that young boy, and she always remembered him with a smile.

And she always told her children of his goodness, and they all loved him very much.

And she always said to herself, "What a good boy that was, and how kind he was to me."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I met that young boy, and I'm glad he helped me."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good son, and I'm glad he is so kind."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good mother, and I'm glad she is so kind."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good life, and I'm glad it is so kind."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good world, and I'm glad it is so kind."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good God, and I'm glad he is so kind."

And she always said to herself, "I'm glad I have a good heaven, and I'm glad it is so kind."

WIT AND WISDOM.

Soot the chimney sweep. Made of awl work—Shoes. Blessed are the poor makers. Cartman's slang—Drive a nail.

No trespasser—Keep out. Hard to beat—the spring carpet. Bonds irrevocable—Vagabonds.

Hens are often set in their ways. Broom harbingers of spring—Owl. Russia won't find John Bull doing.

The early bird catches the worm. "Beautiful Isle of the Sea"—Whale oil.

Gallop and consumption—Eating horse. To sleep in your clothes spoils the nap.

Border troubles—marching the wall paper. The speaker of the house—the phonograph.

Sound investment—buying a telephone. Blunt men sometimes say cutting things.

Frugging is a kind of pious swearing at truth. A saloon divided against itself cannot stand—treat.

Shoes and idle words are not to be thrown at random. A lost tart—The one left in the pastry before a school boy.

Spring breezes—the remarks of ladies while house-cleaning. The mosquito is now humming their "huzzah sweet hum."

The third of the slap jack no longer rounds through the land. It is a had religion that makes us hate the religion of other people.

Switzerland has a National Church, but is without any form of war ship. An on-heat hen is the subtlest work of a politician, says the Boston Press.

"Walk in love." Put a comma after in and see how the sense will be altered. A chap who at cards the other night trumped the best trick in a game.

An honest man is the most lovable work of the Creator. Yes, you—we find it so. Happy is he that is ugly of form and feature, for the girls shan't molest him.

The phonograph has learned to whistle, though it is scarcely out of the woods. Little slips of whisky, little horns of beer, make the high old bender and the drunk severe.

Forgiveness is the most refined and generous trait in human nature. Charms never forgive a man for a mistake. Falling in love is like falling into a cistern—it is mighty easy to fall in, but awful hard to get out.

Why is the fly one of the tallest of insects? Because he stands over six feet without shoes or stockings. What a dull set of financiers those Hollanders are! They have had a bank failure over there for forty years.

Our ancestors, the monkeys, couldn't have been so ignorant after all, Mr. Darwin. They were all educated in the higher branches. "If righteous men are the salt of the earth, why may not pretty girls be considered the sugar?" asked a girl of a little girl. "Because," she replied, "we are its 'sauce'!"

The excruciating heat season is coming round, when they have to roll a dozen hogheads of iron on the right side of the boat to balance the weight of humanity around the bar on the left side.

No matter how thoroughly you clean the house, the wife of the next man who moves in will declare to the neighbors, "I live in it, and will stop mud around everything, trying to make it fit her hogs to live in."

When reproved for failing to keep an engagement with another gentleman, a brave but devoted husband replied: "My dear sir, my intentions were excellent, but a man with a wife is never able to break many engagements against his will."

One was a Baptist and the other was a Congregationalist. The latter asked them what they'd order. "A little dipped toast," said the Baptist. "You may give me the same," said the Congregationalist, "very carefully, with a little butter."

"Here's my wife and I," said a husband, with much complacency, to his silver-wedding guests. "Who have been married five-and-twenty years, and in all that time haven't had a single unkind word with one another." "By Jove!" exclaimed one of the guests. "What a stupid time you must have had of it!"

FOOLISHNESS.—We have some charity for the clergy, for the manner in which some of the women set toward them. Empty-headed women, old and young, make themselves ridiculous by running after their minister. Some of them do all sorts of things to attract the attention of their pastor. Let him all of their troubles, how the baby has had the measles, and how their husbands do not appreciate them, and how wretched they are, etc., and the recital of these things will draw a tear from the eye of the pastor. Most sympathetic with her, and if he does not commit some indiscretion, if he goes no further, he must have a pretty strong opinion of his own and a level head on his shoulders.—Boston Globe.

One of the most absurd things the American people do is to send law breakers to jail and then shut them up there. The prison has a warm room, reading matter, and nothing to do. The wrongdoer, who is a poor creature, has little leisure for reading or pleasure, and to crown all is obliged to help pay for the comforts the criminals receive. Very truly, it is stronger than death.

The blue ribbon may mean anything. The Police Court judge said that a blue ribbon was a mark of honor. No disgrace, no rows, no fairs, no police courts.

THE CHOICE

Blair looked at the merchant with perfect confidence in him. Well, indeed, he could have the pleasure of giving up the money and going home.

A TEMPTATION

GEORGE MILLS sat at his desk in the counting-room busily copying up the entries of the day's business.

"Good morning," said George, courteously looking up. "Anything I can do for you?"

"My name is Blair; Bill Blair," said the old man, as he walked up to the desk.

"What will you do for me?" Blair asked. "I have a pocket-book with me, and I should have had it with me when I was out."

"I will give you a receipt, a'posin' I was to pay you some money I've been owing him."

COMMENTS on the recent Bugbee defalcation, the Boston Advertiser says: "It appears that it was known some years ago that the Western Mr. Bugbee was speculating, and he was not long taken to task and obliged to promise to refrain from outside operations in the future."

A Little on Ventilation.

VENTILATE your school-rooms or dispensary with them entirely. Far better to raise your children in ignorance and want than to raise them in knowledge and luxury.

The Influence of Toys.

CHILDREN speak to their toys, toys become actors with them in the drama of life, and the little owners learn unconsciously what it is to confer ideal qualities on very commonplace objects.

A Home-Made Telephone.

I noticed a recipe for making a cheap toy telephone, by Prof. Everett in a recent lecture on that instrument. In making his instrument you use a bar magnet, and have to go to the length of purchasing a battery.
